Subject: CAmbridge consultation

to whom it may concern,

I have to confess that I haven't had time to go through all of the literature related to this consultation but I did want to raise a significant concern I have about planning in Cambridge in general. It is a concern I have also raised in the consultation about the CWWTPR and in the consultation about East Barnwell developments.

It is this:

Cambridge carrying capacity - I am concerned that no one is looking at the carrying capacity of Cambridge. By this I mean the land itself, what it can sustain. Earlier this year and last year was the first time in living memory that the spring at Nine Wells dried up. This is a really significant and scary event! This means that the demands on the aquifer are exceeding what it can supply. The river is carefully managed otherwise it is likely that it would be significantly drier than it is currently. What will it take before we finally acknowledge that we can't just continue to build houses and hope that we will have enough natural resources to continue to make Cambridge a safe and happy place to live??

And, in case it's not obvious, my assumption is that the well has run dry because too much water is being taken from the aquifer to service the increasing numbers of houses in Cambridge. Our land is not elastic, it can't sustain an ever-increasing number of people.

Thank you for your attention.

Best wishes

Schia Sinclair
